Generally considered the most memorable classic of the 1950s Williams pitch and bat games, though frankly I'm not quite sure why. It's not personally my favorite shot and bat of the '50s. Of this style of play (last year for a wedge-style cabinet which was used on a total of three Williams pitch and bat games like the 1956 Four Bager Deluxe and the 1955 King of Swat), I personally prefer King of Swat. But only the 1957 baseball deluxe was clipped aside for better visibility on the wedge cabinet, which seemed to draw for this game. 1957 Deluxe also used metal legs (less classic to me). Same basic playing field as the previous year's Gar Deluxe Four, with three home run ramps to launch the ball aboard a home run. Follows the previous high score, total Grand Slam and total home runs per player's game. 1957 Deluxe Williams Baseball is still a single player game and has no field selection. The upper glass is 23x 43.5 x 3/16 tempered glass.
